50X1-HUM

1. [redacted] 157 planes participated in flying exercises over Fukien. The East China Air Force Command bases sent 64 fighters and 15 reconnaissance planes, and the Central Chinese Communist Air Force Command sent 28 MIG-15's and 50 YAK jets.
2. The planes participating in the exercises were temporarily organized as the "Fukien Interception Division", with CHANG Kuang-yuan (張光遠), deputy commander of the East China Air Force, as commander. This division (shih 師) comprised 3 t'uan (團), each with 3 ying (營), each with 3 lien (連), each with 8 or 9 fighters. Each t'uan also had one additional lien of 9 reconnaissance planes. The 28 MIG-15's were organized into one ying with 3 lien, all directly controlled by division headquarters. Since the number of participating planes was limited, only 2 t'uan and one ying were actually formed.
3. [redacted] The problem involved interception by the Interception Division of a large number of American planes taking off from Taiwan for an air invasion of Fukien. The Interception Division made 6 flights and repulsed or shot down 100 hypothetical American planes. The exercise lasted 18 hours [redacted]
4. Eight fighters from the Shanghai Air Base Command were organized as the 12 Lien of the 2 T'uan and based at Nany'ing (118-08, 26-39) Airfield. The Fukien Air Base Commander, SHENG Shih (盛石), acted as commander of the 2 T'uan.

5. Planes from the Shanghai Air Base Command all returned to Shanghai since they were responsible for Shanghai air defenses; but the Fukien flying exercises still continued.
